County creates new position

The Lee County Fiscal Court Monday agreed to create a new position in the judge/executive's office because, as Judge/Executive Steve Mays told the Enterprise, "It seems the workload has increased in the summertime."

During the court's regular monthly meeting, agreement was given to hire Savannah Shelton as a full time seasonal office assistant at $7.50 an hour.

Magistrate Everett Lee Marshall asked Mays if the position was needed, then all members of the court gave their approval.

When asked about the position Tuesday, Mays told the newspaper, "Just hired a person to help out. It seems the workload has increased in the summertime. She had been with a program, but the funding had run out."

Also during Monday's meeting, the court hired Travis Charles as a seasonal Solid Waste employee at $8 an hour.

Scott Vanderpool was moved from seasonal to full time probation for six months in the Solid Waste department at $8 an hour.

The court approved a memorandum of agreement with the state Highway Department to receive $125,000 for the resurfacing of certain county roads.

In a related matter, the court approved the county road aid agreement with the state for the 2014-2015 fiscal year.

A budget amendment was approved because the Ambulance Service took in more revenues than anticipated, thus needing less support from the General Fund.

According to County Finance Officer Pearl Spencer, the service was expected to generate $708,000 in revenues, but ended up receiving $805,000. That allowed the court to reduce the amount the general fund was supporting the service from $372,000 to $309,000.

The second and final reading was given to the FY 2014-15 budget.

Lee County Building Supply and Big Sinking Solutions won the culvert bids.

The treasurer's report as of May 31 showed: General Fund - $504,312; Road Fund - $256,299; Jail Fund - $19,838; L.G.E.A. - $201,630; Ambulance Fund - $86,632; and Solid Waste Fund - $172,963.

Man in accident broke into grave

The man involved in a fatal Owsley County automobile accident on June 8 has a criminal history that includes involvement in a grave-robbing incident in 2004 and is a registered sex offender. According to Kentucky State Police, Dave A. Reed, 55 of Booneville was driving a 1992 Ford Ranger east on KY 30 on that Sunday just four miles east of Booneville.

Getting rewired

Kentucky Utilities workers were dealing with an odd problem last Wednesday (June 11) after Tuesday's storm. A tree had fallen on some power lines that then broke the pole just above the telephone lines. The crew eventually cut off the top of the pole, which is located near Beattyville's Apple Market. (See Page 5 for related story.)

Where did he go?

Kentucky State Police Trooper Brent Lynch examines the interior of this vehicle that went off KY 11 near the 17-mile marker in Owsley County at Pebworth on Monday afternoon. Lynch said the driver left the vehicle after the accident, and was not at the scene. He said the vehicle is owned by an Ernie Cornett of Beattyville.

Auditor blasts Wolfe

The state auditor blistered the Wolfe County Fiscal Court Tuesday in an audit that alleges the county sold gravel to private individuals, reimbursed an ambulance service for used ambulances with no invoices provided, and used federal money for sidewalks instead of a meat processing plant.

According to the audit, "The county has been purchasing gravel in excess of the county's needs and selling it to private individuals. Gravel sales totaled $4,842 for fiscal year 2013. Purchases were made at the county garage and receipts were prepared and provided to customers. Funds were then given to the county judge/executive. The first deposit was made on April 19, 2013 for $3,063 consisting of funds collected from March 13, 2012 through April 19, 2013. It is not the responsibility of the county government to provide gravel for purchase for private individuals. Costs incurred from gravel purchases include the price of the gravel, expenses are incurred for trucks used for hauling, fuel bills and payroll for truck drivers. In addition to not recovering all costs associated with the purchase of the gravel, there is also the appearance and opportunity for gravel to be used for private purposes.

We recommend the county cease the practice of selling the county's gravel surplus and only use county funds for the maintenance of county property."

The county judge/executive gave no response to the auditors about the finding.

There was also a problem with credit cards.

The audit says, "The county used credit cards for a variety of purposes during fiscal year 2013, including conferences and meals purchases, computer and software purchases as well as parts for equipment repairs. Credit card use is allowable, however all purchases must be evidenced by original detailed invoices to determine if the purchases are allowable and for county business. Of the total $15,301 of credit card invoices tested, $7,312 did not have a detailed invoice. Since the county did not require all purchases to have detailed original invoices attached, we could not determine that payments made for the disbursements were appropriate. The county should require individuals that use the county's credit card, maintain all original detailed invoices or the use of the credit card should be limited to those individuals who abide by the original detailed evidence for all charges."

Again, the judge/executive gave no response.

The audit found that the county does not have a written agreement with the firm that provides ambulance service to the county.

Auditors suggested that such an agreement be drafted.

There was no response from the judge/executive.

Also related to the ambulance service, the auditors noted that firms changed beginning in June 2012.

Because of a lack of invoices from fiscal year 2010 onward, the auditors said that money from a Kentucky Board of Emergency Medical Services (KBEMS) grant should be reimbursed to the agency.

The audit says, "Therefore, the $22,734 of KBEMS grant funds should be reimbursed to the Kentucky Board of Emergency Medical Services since the ambulance service approved by them is no longer servicing the area and the new service is not an approved agency. We will refer this to the county attorney and to the Kentucky Board of Emergency Medical Services."

The judge/executive gave no response.

Directly following that section, the audit says, "In addition to the above mentioned items, the county provided us with two invoices totaling $26,950 for ambulances purchased by their new ambulance service. The county reimbursed the new ambulance service $22,105 for this purchase from the KBEMS grant funds. The invoices provided listed the make, model, and vehicle identification number (VIN) of the ambulances the ambulance service was requesting for. Our testing revealed the VIN of the listed vehicles could not be located in the county clerk's registration system, AVIS, which registers and tracks all vehicles registered in Kentucky. The county provides insurance on the ambulances, however these ambulances could not be found on the insurance list. Also, the ambulances noted on the invoices would not have been allowable disbursements of the grant funds because they were older than three model years based on the KBEMS regulations and 202 KAR 7:250.

Upon inquiry of the ambulance service, we were told they decided to purchase different ambulances than the ones noted on the invoices provided to the county. The ambulance service was asked to provide the new invoices to document the purchase and ensure the ambulances were in fact in the county's name and insurance was provided on them. However, the invoices requested to support the ambulance purchases were not provided. Therefore the new ambulance service received county funds based on false documentation that was not accurate and did not substantiate the reimbursement made.

We recommend the County consult with the Kentucky’s hardwood can grow energy jobs

By Cheryl Avioli

Kentucky’s hardwood industry has a significant role in many of our State’s signature industries. Kentucky’s forests are harvested to craft the world’s finest bourbon barrels, to fence the world’s fastest horses and to build the courts for the country’s best basketball teams. Currently, the hardwood industry employs over 56,000 workers and contributes $12.7 billion to the economy every year. As we look to the future, our forest residuals can create an equally important role in creating a new sustainable energy industry – biomass power.

While Kentucky has long enjoyed a ready supply of energy with abundant coal reserves, new federal regulations are driving up the cost and decreasing demand for coal-generated electricity. This translates into fewer jobs and economic distress for the hard-working families who have mined coal for decades. Certainly, the folks in Perry County – who have lost 21 percent of their coal mining employment in the last year – would prefer to have these regulations disappear so that they can get back to work. Unfortunately, these regulations don’t appear to be going away any time soon, if ever.

So what do we do to restore Kentucky’s previous place among the leading energy states and get people back to work? Given Kentucky’s abundance of forested land (12.4 million acres) and a well-established forestry industry, sustainable woody biomass is a key part of the answer. Woody biomass energy is energy derived from sawmill residuals and wood that would otherwise go to waste or decompose in the forest. Biomass accounts for more renewable power in the U.S. than wind and solar combined. Unlike wind and solar, which fluctuate with atmospheric conditions, biomass is a consistent source of renewable energy available around the clock and a critical asset in our national drive toward energy independence.

To obtain best pricing and comply with government regulations, utilities will increasingly look to secure contracts with multiple energy providers that include a mix of non-renewable fuels (natural gas, oil, coal) and renewable energy, such as biomass, wind and solar. Because Kentucky is already among the leading coal states in America, it is well positioned to capitalize on this changing demand for scalable, diversified energy resources.

In the 2014 Farm Bill, the federal government has earmarked $25 million annually to position biomass for growth in disadvantaged regions of the country. Just last week the federal government confirmed its support for biomass energy with the following statement from the U.S. Department of Agriculture: “The potential to achieve transformational progress on biomass energy in rural America and generate tremendous economic opportunities is very promising. Investing in agricultural and forestry producers who cultivate energy biomass and supporting next-generation biofuels facilities make America more energy independent, help combat climate change and create jobs in rural America.”

By creating a market and producing the energy here and now, Kentuckians will be able to avoid having to buy energy from other states. New federally imposed rules will likely force Kentucky businesses and ratepayers to buy clean energy from other states if we cannot produce any here in the Commonwealth. Renewable standards or goals are now in place in more than 40 U.S. states and territories. Over the long term, the price of biomass power is much more certain and less risky compared to other sources of electricity and will be cheaper than other base load alternatives.

Diversifying Kentucky’s energy sources to include a vibrant biomass industry can have immediate impact. We have a chance to move forward now with a biomass power plant sited for Hazard, Kentucky where unemployment sits at a painful 12.9 percent. Opponents of the plant and activists from out of state are behind an effort to stymie this project in court even though it has already been approved by the Kentucky Public Service Commission.

To learn more about biomass energy, visit <http://energy.ky.gov>. It is time to get Kentuckians back to work with steady jobs that meet the new demands of a growing, nationally-diversified energy market. In doing so, we can stimulate a sluggish economy with one of Kentucky’s leading natural resources – our forests.

Cheryl Avioli is a former member of the New York State Public Service Commission and is in favor of leveraging Kentucky’s energy resources to optimize its role in America’s plan for energy diversification. She resides in Kentucky with her husband and their five children.

We must fight for those who’ve given so much while asking for little in return

By Alison Lundergan Grimes

Our military heroes make the ultimate sacrifice to preserve our freedom, and we owe so much to every veteran who has worn our nation’s uniform.

Like all Kentuckians, I am horrified by reports of deadly neglect of patients at hospitals operated by the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs. Although a full investigation is still in progress, it is apparent that at least several dozen former service personnel died while awaiting treatment at VA facilities.

This situation is intolerable.

Last month, I was among the first in the nation to call for the resignation of Veterans Affairs Secretary Eric Shinseki.

I took no pleasure in insisting that General Shinseki leave his post. As a career officer, he served his nation faithfully, and I have no doubt that he wanted the best possible treatment for our veterans.

But government officials must be held accountable for the operations of their departments. Failures of such magnitude in the VA hospital system demand a change in leadership.

Meeting the needs of veterans and active-duty servicemen and women – and being their fierce advocate – has been a top priority of my tenure in public service.

As Kentucky’s Secretary of State, I traveled to the Middle East to meet with deployed members of the armed forces to learn why personnel who risk their lives on our behalf had difficulty casting ballots that would be counted in elections back home. I made recommendations and worked with state legislators from both parties to strengthen and protect service members’ right to vote.

As a U.S. Senate candidate, I have repeatedly called for my opponent, Sen. Mitch McConnell, to extend unemployment insurance benefits for impacted veterans and other dislocated workers. Instead, Sen. McConnell voted to cut off nearly 200,000 American veterans from unemployment benefits.

I also believe we have a moral obligation to make permanent the federal “VOW to Hire Heroes Act,” which provides businesses a one-time tax credit for every unemployed or disabled veteran they hire. Unfortunately, Mitch McConnell voted against extending this program, which expired at the end of last year.

A central plank of my comprehensive jobs plan is the need to expand education and training opportunities for veterans and service members, through public/private partnerships that help them translate their military skills and expertise to the civilian workforce.

Moreover, the federal Earned Income Tax Credit and the Child Tax Credit supports approximately 28,000 Kentucky veterans. These credits also play a major role in helping tens of thousands of working military families, and their children, stay above poverty levels. In 2010, Mitch McConnell introduced a tax plan that would have permanently renewed the Bush-era tax cuts for the wealthy but not extended EITC and CTC improvements. When I am your senator, I will stand up for our veterans and fight to preserve both credits. After all they’ve done to fight for our freedom, our veterans and military personnel shouldn’t have to come home and fight their own U.S. senator.

Finally, even after the current VA hospital tragedy is resolved, other critically important veterans’ health issues will remain. These include improved access to mental-health services, prosthetic care and wound regeneration. We must address these challenges with a sense of urgency that disgracefully seems lacking in today’s Washington.

The struggle to provide veterans and active personnel the benefits they deserve – and have been promised – is a commitment we must all take on. I invite all Kentuckians to join me in this fight on behalf of those who have given so much while asking for little in return. There is not another day to be wasted.

Alison Lundergan Grimes is Kentucky’s Secretary of State and Democratic nominee for U.S. Senate.

CONE-SHAPED CORNEAL BULGE

“Keratoconus” is a condition characterized by a cone-shaped bulge that develops in thinning corneal tissue. It prevents the light entering the eye from being focused correctly on the retina, causing distortion of vision. Vision changes usually begin in the middle to late teenage years, and continue until sometime between the ages of 25 to 40, when they slow down or cease. Initial symptoms include frequent or sudden large increases in nearsightedness or astigmatism. Keratoconus may occur in one or both eyes. Images may appear blurred or distorted, and glare may present a problem. When glasses fail to fully correct vision, hard contacts may be used to provide an optically smooth surface. In some cases, a corneal transplant may be necessary.

Headaches and general eye pain can also be symptoms. Keratoconus, especially in the early stages may be difficult to diagnose and all of the above symptoms could be associated with other eye problems. Simply recognizing symptoms does not by itself diagnose keratoconus. If it’s been awhile since you have had your eyes examined, we urge you to call KENTUCKY EYE INSTITUTE at 606-666-9393 and make an appointment. We’re located at 540 Jett Drive, where our ultimate goal is your good sight. We care about you and your eyes. We specialize in “EYE CARE FOR ALL AGES.”

P.S. In its earliest stages, keratoconus causes slight blurring and distortion of vision and increased sensitivity to glare and light.

A different view

By Betty Crabtree

I have a friend who told me she has a tee shirt that has the following quote, "I've been through enough to know that God is taking care of me." Yes!.

So I thought of Psalm 139, and its affirmation that God does know, care, watch over us, works out his purpose in the life of his servant(s) AND continue his work in us until it is absolutely and completely done. Philipians 1:6 affirms this too, "being confident of this very thing, that He who has begun a GOOD work in you will complete it until the day of Jesus Christ." (Good meaning in a physical and moral sense, which produces benefits. Strongs # 18)

Let's look at Psalm 139: 1 -2, "O Lord, You have searched me and known me, You know my sitting down and my rising up; You understand my thought afar off." (Wow! He knows, He sees clearly the inner place within us. He knows every move we make; He knows our thoughts.) Verse 4, "For there is not a word on my tongue, but behold, O Lord, You know it altogether." (Reminds me of the little song, "Be careful little mouth what you say.")

Verse 56, "And laid Your hand upon me." Verse 7, "Where can I flee from Your spirit?" "Verses 11 and 12, "Darkness' shall not hide from You, darkness and light are both alike to You." Verse 13, "For You formed my inward parts; You covered (or knit or wove) me in my mother's womb." He is saying I love and covered you before you were born.) Verse 16, "Your eyes saw my substance, being yet unformed. And in Your book they all were written. The days fashioned for me, when as yet there were none of them." Verse 17, "How precious also are Your thoughts to me, O God!" (Such good words.)

In Psalm 119: 11 says, "Thy Word have I hidden in my heart, that I might not sin against You." (Sin meaning to do wrong, miss the way. # 2938 Strongs) Then 119: 15, "I will meditate on Your precepts and look into Your ways." (We're too dumb to live this life without God to guide us.)

Then Psalm 17: 4b, "By Your word of Your lips, I have kept away from the pathis of the destroyer."

Essential to know and study the Word (Bible)! You bet!

Obituaries

Mary Sylvania Childers Spencer

"My soul magnifies the Lord, and my spirit has rejoiced in God my Savior." (Luke 1:46-47). Mary Sylvania Childers Spencer passed away peacefully at her home at 116 Spencer Lane, Beattyville, KY on Saturday, June 14, 2014. She was born on February 28, 1933 in Wolfe County, KY. She was preceded in death by her husband of 47 years, Earl Eugene Spencer and her parents Herbert and Hazel Childers and 5 sisters, Vickie, Patty, Judy, Beverly, and Leona and a host of other relatives. Survivors include her four children,: Donna (Bill) Sade, Kingsport, TN; Dan (Sue) Spencer, Beattyville, KY; Sharon (Earl) Vires, Beattyville, KY; Tammy (Gary) Howell, Beattyville, KY; grandchildren and step-grandchildren: Gena Howell; Dustin Howell, Heather Caudill, Lauren Sade, Brandon Sade; and one great-grandson, Elijah Caudill; a sister, Ruby (Bob) Abner, Winchester, KY, a great-aunt Mary Childers, Wixom, MI, and several cousins, nieces and nephews, great-nieces and great-nephews.

She was baptized in the Church of Christ, but worshiped in several denominations throughout her life. She was a living symbol of a Christian mother, and was a lifelong student of the scriptures. She had too many other roles during her life to name. She loved many and was loved by many. She especially enjoyed gardening, canning, cooking, quilting, crocheting, and surfing the internet. Prior to her marriage in 1957, she was employed at a box factory in Dayton, Ohio. After marriage, she was a homemaker and the wife of a farmer. Then as her children grew up, she was employed at a local shoe factory, Riverside and Bobcat dairy bars, and through Experience Works she held part-time positions at the Lee County solid waste office and Lee County Public library.

In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be sent to Hospice Care Plus, 208 Kidd Drive, Berea, KY 40403. Newnam Funeral Home (<http://www.newnamfuneral-home.com>) will serve the family and organize the celebration of life services. The family will receive friends on Monday evening at 6:00 p.m.-9 p.m. at the funeral home (108 Center Street, Beattyville, KY 41311). Pastors Gary Marshall and Mike Spencer will conduct the "home-going" worship service on Tuesday, June 17 at 11:00 a.m. Interment will immediately follow the service at Riverview Cemetery in Beattyville, KY.

Preacher Bob's Korner

By Billy A. Davis

FATHER'S DAY

I had a wonderful Father's Day. I hope you had the same. Best wishes to all our fathers. Here are some thoughts that will help you to function as good fathers.

PATIENCE

It is very important for parents to have patience in their dealings with their children. The children will pick this up very quickly, that they are being dealt with and provided patience.

"Patience is not passive; on the contrary it is active; it is concentrated strength." (Bulwer)

"Patience is the support of weakness, impatience is the ruin of strength." (Carlton)

I am not a very good example of patience. I guess I did not inherit it. My father, who was a wonderful father, would drive blocks out of the way so he would not have to wait at a stoplight.

PUNISHMENT

This is a very important function of a father, providing discipline and correction.

It is generally agreed that the father is the one to dish out correction. You have heard of mothers saying, "Just wait until your father gets home." I don't know that this is the best thing to be said.

Again, children should always let it be known to them why they are being punished. After the correction they should always make sure the children still feel they are care for. Even God the Father corrects his children, and he lets it be known he still loves them and it is for their benefit.

PLENTY

Now when we say plenty

what do we mean? Do we mean money or material things?

It goes without saying that the father should provide the basic things for the family. We do not want to overlook this fact. Some rich CEOs or athletes have no problem in providing the material things, but still need to provide plenty love, care and affection. Our children need to receive love more than anything else.

Some provide their "kids" with many material things, but neglect to show them love.

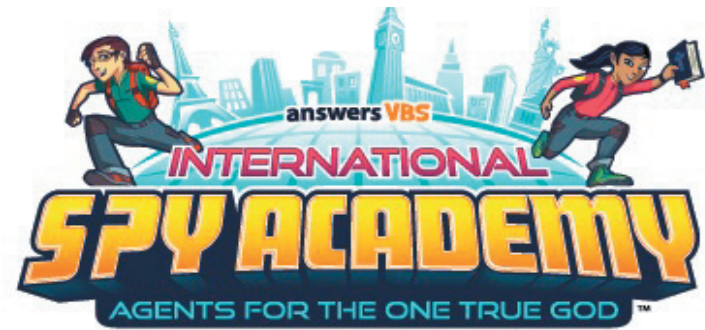

The children will know when they are loved.

"Love and a cough cannot be hid." (Herbert)

"Where there is room in the heart there is always room in the house." (Moore)

"Love is like the moon; when it does not increase, it decreases." (Sequer)

Never correct a child when you are angry.

Reading is “FUN”damental kicks off

Submitted by Sherry Lanham

Students and parents attended the Reading is “FUN”damental kick off at Beattyville Elementary. Every student in grades K-5 received several new books to take home and read over the summer. During the event students and parents picked out books for the family and students did a performance for the audience.

Three from Lee Middle School named Roger’s Explorers

Ellen Grace Jennings

Mollie Johnson

Lee County students Ellen Jennings, Gram Durbin, and Mollie Johnson have been named 2014 Rogers Explorers. Lee County Middle School students Ellen Jennings, Gram Durbin, (no photo available) and Mollie Johnson have been selected by The Center for Rural Development to build their math, science, and technology skills this summer at the 2014 Rogers Explorers youth leadership program. One hundred and fifty middle school graduates from Southern and Eastern Kentucky will converge on the campuses of five Kentucky colleges and universities for this year’s Rogers Explorers program. It is the largest class ever in the history of the eight-year-old program. “Rogers Explorers gives students a one-of-a-kind learning experience to explore different career opportunities and possible career paths in the fields of math, science, and technology,” said Delaney Stephens, community liaison and youth programs coordinator for The Center. “The program also encourages creative thinking and teamwork and builds leadership skills as the region’s next generation of leaders and entrepreneurs.” Ellen is the daughter of David and Judy Jennings. Gram is the son of Phillip and Jana Durbin. Mollie is the daughter of Michael and Amy Johnson. Rogers Explorers is presented by The Center for Rural Development in partnership with Lindsey Wilson College, University of the Cumberlands, Eastern Kentucky University, Morehead State University, and the newest host site, Asbury University. Students spend three days and two nights on the campuses of one of these Kentucky colleges or universities. The program is open to eighth-grade students within The Center’s 45-county primary service area who have a strong interest in developing skills in leadership, technology, math, science, and community service. For more information about Rogers Explorers, call The Center at 606-677-6000, email youth@centertech.com, or visit www.centeryouthprograms.com.

University of Kentucky announces Dean’s List

The University of Kentucky has released its Dean’s List for the Spring 2014 semester. A total of 5,477 students were recognized for their outstanding academic performance. To make a Dean’s List in one of the UK colleges, a student must earn a grade point average of 3.6 or higher and must have earned 12 credits or more in that semester, excluding credits earned in pass-fail classes. Some UK colleges require a 3.5 GPA to make the Dean’s List. In Lee County Brant Mitchell Cornelius, So in Kinesiology, In Owsley County, Candace Opal Rochelle McQueen, Sr in Kinesiology.

Science would be a lot easier with a time machine, wouldn’t it? Scientists are always asking questions about how things in the past led to the universe we know today. Take the formation of our solar system 4.6 billion years ago. We’ve got a pretty good idea of how it happened, but wouldn’t it be great if we could see actual snapshots of the entire process?

We can actually get pretty close to doing that, it turns out. A group of astronomers recently went back and looked at some old photos taken by the Hubble Space Telescope. They wanted to see if a new way of looking at the photos would allow them to observe other stars in the early stages of forming a solar system. What these astronomers were looking for were

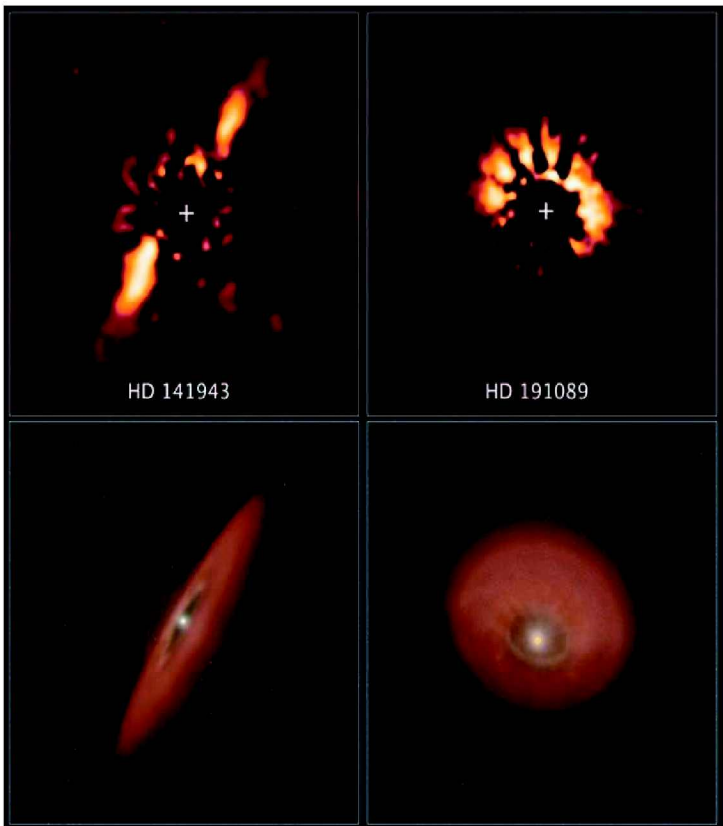

A Glimpse Into the Past
By Alex H. Kasprak

hazy, dusty disks of debris surrounding young stars. That’s because we are pretty sure that our solar system formed from a dusty cloud that turned into a star. The material left over would have collected in a massive disk with gas, dust, and larger bits of space junk colliding and growing in size as they orbited around the star. Eventually, we think, these clumps would have formed into the planets, moons, asteroids, and comets we know today. It’s pretty hard to see dust or even a planet elsewhere in the galaxy. We’ve seen them before, but it would be great to be able to go back and use old data to try and find more of them. These scientists decided to take a look at how light scattered around some stars already imaged by the Hubble Space Telescope. They looked for evidence of material blocking the path of the stars’ light. Their efforts paid off. Using the new technique, they found five new disks around stars that showed no signs of having a disk the first time scientists looked at them. One of the stars, HD 141943, appears to be exactly like our own sun when it was first forming planets. It’s practically a snapshot of the birth of our own solar system! With any luck, scientists will be able to locate more and more planet-forming disks by applying this method to other old (and new) images. If we find more systems similar to our own at different stages in their evolution, we might be able to see the whole process of solar system formation from start to finish. That would be as close to using a time machine as we are ever going to get! Watch this cool video about how our solar system formed at NASA’s Space Place and then download the accompanying poster: <http://spaceplace.nasa.gov/solar-system-formation>.

Jackson Energy thanks members for patience

By Carol Wright,
Jackson Energy President & CEO

Spring storms have been hard on Jackson Energy and their members. In late May, we had a storm that left 12,300 members without power, and a few weeks later, on June 10, another storm hit the region. This time, 10,775 co-op members were left in the dark from falling tree limbs, broken poles and uprooted trees.

The outages these storms left behind are unusual for the spring. These are numbers we might see following a winter ice storm, or snow storm. No matter what causes the damage, it's still often a time-consuming process to restore the power.

Getting the power back on as quickly and safely as possible is our priority. This involves bringing in extra crews to assist our line techs, and this storm was no different. Seven extra contractor crews and a crew from a neighboring cooperative assisted with the repairs. Altogether, 93 workers were in the field restoring power.

We had trucks and boots on the ground shortly after the winds stopped blowing and they worked late into the night on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday restoring service to over 10,600 members in about 48 hours. The remaining members, less than 100, had their power back on Friday evening.

Making repairs after a storm is a time-consuming and methodical process. We often get calls from members who say they know what the problem is and it won't take but a few minutes of work on a pole outside their home to get the power back on. What they don't realize is that the main line going to their home may also be damaged, and power has to be restored to the main feeder lines before the smaller, individual lines can be repaired. This storm was unique, as well, in that there were a large number of members served by smaller lines that were down. The main feeder line may have been operating, but the number of individual outages was abnormally high.

We know it's frustrating to be left in the dark, and that's why we bring in extra crews and work long hours to make repairs as quickly as we can when storms leave behind widespread damage.

Jackson Energy wants to thank our members for being patient when we do have storm damage, and we also thank you for the kind comments you send our way for the line techs who put in those long hours. It's our job to take care of the lines, and it's a job we must do safely.

"Wolfe" from Front

County Attorney to determine if the ambulance service should reimburse the County the $22,105."

The judge/executive had no response.

The final issue concerned the use of federal money for something other than its requested intent.

According to the audit, "The county used $48,522 of restricted Community Block Development Grant (CDBG) funds to pay for sidewalk renovation. The County was awarded a $300,000 CDBG Grant for the purposes of construction of a meat processing plant at the Wolfe-Morgan Multi-County Industrial Development Authority Park. Per the CDBG grant Agreement allowable costs for this grant only include expenses related to the construction of the meat processing plant."

The applicable regulations are then cited.

The audit then says, "By using CDBG funds for non-allowable expenses the county has the potential to lose future federal funding and may have to pay back funds received that were used incorrectly."

Since these funds were restricted for the construction of a meat processing plant and should not be used for any other purpose, the county should reimburse the special project funds where CDBG funds were deposited. On March 7, 2014, the county transferred $48,522 from the general fund to the special projects fund as required.

We will refer this matter to the Department for Local Government, the oversight agency for review."

There was no response from the judge/executive.

Police said the vehicle crossed the centerline and sideswiped a Dodge Avenger, operated by 29-year-old Christopher P. Ritchie of Jackson.

The Ranger drove off the road and struck a tree, police said. Whitney D. Roberts, 23 of Booneville, and the daughter of Reed, was fatally injured in the accident.

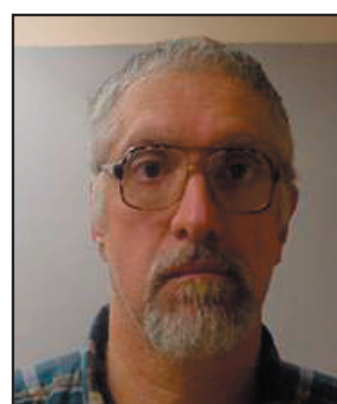

Reed was flown to the University of Kentucky Medical Center for treatment of non-life threatening injuries.

KSP Trooper Charles Brandenburg is continuing his investigation into the accident.

Following a jury trial, Reed was found guilty in 2005 of complicity in the desecration of venerated objects, complicity in violating a grave, complicity in theft by unlawful taking over $300 and complicity in the abuse of a corpse.

He, along with Bobby Terry, Clarence Terry, Ena

Dave A. Reed

Faye Murrell and Jacqueline Smith, were indicted for assisting each other in the disintering of the remains of Peggy Cornett and taking jewelry.

Reed was sentenced to 15 years, but according to the Kentucky Department of Corrections he completed his obligations in March 2013.

Reed is also listed on the Kentucky State Police sex offender registry.

The report says that he was guilty of sexual abuse in the first degree of a three-year-old victim.

You will always be her favorite sidekick.

Her most treasured memories are of being with you. You worked in the garden side-by-side. She chaperoned your first dance. She even let you join her for bridge nights with her friends. When you learned to drive, the two of you took one roadtrip after another.

At Hospice Care Plus, we know who she is to you. We'll be there with compassion and expert care, so both of you can still have what you love most: time. Together.

At Hospice Care Plus, we help those with a serious illness live life more fully.
